Its capture, if confirmed, also means that the Serbs have effected a new crossing of the Cerna river.

PERCIVAL LOWELL, ASTRONOMER, DIES

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS) Pleasanton, Calif., Nov. 13.—Dr. Percival Lowell, founder and director of the Lowell observatory here, and an astronomer of international reputation, died here last night from apoplexy.

Observer of Mars. Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 13.—Dr. Percival Lowell was best known as the principal exponent of the theory that Mars is inhabited.

Astronomers generally, while expressing regard for his ability and enthusiasm, regarded many of his theories as fanciful, and of them only a few were accepted. Dr. Lowell was a brother of A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard University.

It was from the observatory at Flagstaff that he announced his discovery of vegetation on Mars, with inference that the planet was inhabited, and his observation of canals as being so regular and uniform as to indicate that they were artificial.

A colleague of Dr. Lowell said today that while many astronomers did not agree with his theories, they were confirming his observations very frequently.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 13.—John A. Aylward, aged 55 years, United States attorney for the western district and twice the democratic gubernatorial standard bearer, was found dead in bed early Sunday morning. The discovery of Mr. Aylward's death was made by his son, Paul, who went to call on his father. Physicians who were immediately summoned believed that Mr. Aylward might have been dead several hours and were generally agreed that death was due to a cerebral hemorrhage.

Mr. Aylward was in the best of health when he retired Saturday night. He spent an unusually busy day at his office preparing for the Shields trial which was to have been started at La Crosse Tuesday morning. He left his office at 5:30 o'clock and spent the evening with his family retiring at eleven o'clock.

News of Mr. Aylward's death, discovery of which was made shortly after eight o'clock, spread rapidly throughout the city. It created a profound shock in business circles and among his many friends.

Funeral on Tuesday. The funeral will be held Wednesday morning at nine o'clock from Saint Raphael's Catholic church, of which he was a member. Mr. Aylward leaves a widow and two sons, Arthur, age 16 years, and Paul, nine years.

Mr. Aylward was born at Black Earth, Dane county, Wisconsin, March 16, 1861. He was one of an old-fashioned family of nine children. His father was a farmer and his mother, Mrs. Mary Aylward, was a section foreman for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway company at Black Earth. Mr. Aylward was educated in the public schools of his native town. He graduated from the high school at the age of sixteen, from which he became wholly dependent upon his own resources.

He worked with his father on the railroad section for three years, excepting during the winter months, when he taught district school. In this way he secured funds to enable him to attend the university.

He graduated from the University of Wisconsin in the modern classical course in June, 1884. While at the university he was president of the university law society. He was the sophomore semi-public debate, and was a member of the successful "joint-debate" team which won the championship of the university in 1885. The summer of 1884, the National Educational association met at Madison. Prior to his graduation, Mr. Aylward was elected by the student body to represent the students of the university at the meeting of the association. He was thus made a life member of that association.

Being in debt and without funds to take the study of law, Mr. Aylward taught as principal of different high schools in the state for five years. During the last three years he was in charge of the Virgo high school.

His success in teaching was recognized by the state superintendent of public education, who, without solicitation, appointed Mr. Aylward as one of the state teachers' institute conductors.

Mr. Aylward graduated from the Wisconsin State University Law school in the class of 1890, and entered into the practice of his profession. For the first year he worked in the office of Bashford, O'Connor & Polleys, and then became a member of the firm.

Mr. O'Connor was then attorney general of the state. Mr. Polleys later went into the service of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railway company, and became a member of the firm.

STRIKE VOTE EFFECTIVE IF RAILROADS SEEK TO EVADE THE ADAMSON ACT.

BROTHERHOODS STILL HOLD WHIP IF RAILROADS SEEK TO EVADE THE ADAMSON ACT.

CAR SHORTAGE ACUTE

Interstate Commerce Commission Starts Inquiry at Louisville With Regard to Traffic Conditions.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

New York, Nov. 13.—Failure of the railroads of the country to live up to the spirit and intent of the Adamson eight hour law, will result in the strike vote of the four big railroad brotherhoods being put into effect, it was announced here after a three hour conference between brotherhood and railway representatives.

The conference was called to discuss and if possible reach some agreement or conclusion to the working provisions of the law, which goes into effect January 1. The strike vote referred to by Mr. Lee is that taken prior to the conference between the railroad and brotherhood heads and President Wilson, which was followed by the passage of the Adamson law after the brotherhoods threatened to put the vote into effect at that time.

No Agreement Reached. When the conferees adjourned today for luncheon, it was stated by brotherhood representatives that so far nothing had been accomplished. The brotherhood representatives said they had worked out an interpretation of the eight hour law, but they have refused to divulge it for the reason the roads, or some of them, had announced their decision to fight it through the courts.

A strike vote is still in effect," said Lee, "and if the railroads do not live up to the very spirit and intent of the law in accordance with their own interpretation, it is the duty of the brotherhoods to stand by their own interpretation of their strongest cards. This time there is nothing that can stop them."

Mr. Lee added any advance by the railroad in placing in effect the eight hour law will be met with instant action by the brotherhoods. He said he was confident that the conference would resume its deliberations this afternoon.

Car Shortage Acute. Louisville, Ky., Nov. 13.—To the various messages advocated by railroad representatives for prevention of car shortages such as now exist in various parts of the country, a suggestion for the issuance of traffic maps by the interstate commerce commission was made this morning by J. T. Boucher, chief clerk of the car wrecking department of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad.

The question of handling the car supply in such a manner as to maintain the correct balance on all roads, and to believe that it would be a difficult one at any time.

"I believe it would be made easier," he said, "if conditions were visualized for the men who have the work of cars and stations should be furnished with maps showing the portions of the country where shortages exist."

WILL MAKE NO CHANGE IN CABINET

PRESIDENT WILSON IS REPORTED TO BE CONSIDERING NO NEW CABINET APPOINTMENTS.

HAS NO RESIGNATIONS

McAdoo, Baker, Daniels and Redfield Have Not Indicated Their Intentions to Quit, Say Latest Advice.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

Washington, Nov. 13.—President Wilson was back at his desk in the White House today, after an absence of two months, prepared to take up important foreign problems which have been held in abeyance pending the election, as well as domestic questions. These included the German submarine situation, the Mexican problem, and a number of federal appointments.

The president was expected to consider first the submarine situation, which is admitted to be a summary of recent developments in German submarine warfare, prepared by the state department, was ready to be laid before him, and in addition he probably soon will confer again with Ambassador Gerard on the situation.

The president has not even considered the question of changes in his cabinet, according to administration officials, who characterized as premature reports that he had decided on such changes. It is possible, however, that one or two cabinet officers may not remain after March 4.

No Cabinet Changes. Officials in close touch with President Wilson declared today that it is almost certain that he will urge all the present members of the cabinet to remain at their post, and changes are not expected unless members themselves desire to quit the official family. It is considered possible, however, that one or more members of the cabinet may resign for personal reasons.

January McAdoo has been frequently mentioned as one member not likely to remain, and Representative Glass of Virginia, chairman of the house banking and currency committee, has suggested for his post. It was stated definitely today that McAdoo can remain in the president's cabinet as long as he desires, and it is denied he has offered his resignation.

In case there is a vacancy on the supreme court bench, Attorney General Gregory, Secretary of War, or Secretary of the Interior, would be considered first for the appointment.

Secretary Redfield, Secretary Baker, and Secretary Daniels, also have been mentioned as members of the cabinet who might desire to quit public life, but it was stated definitely today that none of them had signified any such intentions.

Promotion for Tumulty. Secretary Tumulty also is expected to remain in his present position, although he could be appointed as a member of the cabinet of the president. Report has connected Tumulty's name with a cabinet position, but it was stated authoritatively today he will not become a cabinet officer.

Because of the probability the next house will be republican, the president is laying plans to have enacted as much important legislation as possible during the short session which opens next month. Measures he particularly desires to pass are those to allow American exporters to establish commonwealths in the future of a crisis similar to that which threatened the country in a railroad strike and other railroad legislation suggested by him, when the strike threatened.

The president has begun preparation of the next message to congress. He plans to urge that a number of these questions be taken up.

EVANSVILLE PASTOR IN TRINITY PULPIT

During Absence of Father Willmann,
L. A. Jahn, Trinity Pulpit—Points Out Transcendancy of God.

In a brief but powerful sermon the Reverend L. A. Jahn of Evansville, who filled the pulpit at the Trinity Episcopal church yesterday in the absence of Father Willmann, drew a comparison between the transcending character of God and the transiency of man and of the world.

No matter how much man changed God was always forgiving, always kind and just. The ideal of man was to combine real service with worship to attain any end worth while. This would be unchanging even if man did not change from day to day, for God being always the same over the ages and recognized true service and devotion to fellowmen, no matter from whence it emanated.

SONS' SEEING WORLD DON'T WORRY PARENTS

Nephew of Former Local Girl and Companion at Yale "Truant" to See World.

Martin Dick, North State street, Chicago, and his pal, Paul Martin, of Lake Forest, students at Yale, have given the home folks something to be bothered about with their unexpected packing up and disappearance—as they remarked, "Make their own way in the world." Not desiring to be regarded by the hoi polloi as merely the sons of the rich they have evidently started out to show former associates and acquaintances that the red and not the blue blood flows in their veins.

Mrs. W. P. Martin yesterday claimed not to have heard from her son and evidenced the conclusion that the family was not worried about him. A. B. Dick also wasn't bothered and like Mrs. Martin refused to say whether or not he had heard from Martin.

The youngsters (both are but twenty) is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Dick, Mrs. Dick, nee Miss Withington, Janesville.

While driving down the Milwaukee street hill yesterday afternoon, the automobile of Charles Graves skidded on the slippery pavement, jumped, the curbing, and crashed headlong into a tree in front of the residence of B. B. Hunsberr, 402 East Milwaukee street. Graves, who was driving, was unhurt, for he had the steering wheel to hold onto, but his companion, Frank Vosh, 414 South Main street, was hurled forward into the windshield by the abruptness of their stop. His face was rather badly cut above the left eye, but otherwise he was unhurt. Vosh was taken into the Hunsberr home, where Dr. M. A. Cunningham, who happened to be passing at the time of the accident, dressed the wound. The rear wheel of the car was broken, the radiator dented in, and the front axle sprung. Witnesses of the accident declare that the men were lucky to get off as easily as they did.

CAREFREE GIRL NO LONGER; WAR MAKES HER SERIOUS WOMAN

Princess Marie.

Princess Marie, the sixteen-year-old daughter of King Ferdinand of Roumania, like almost every other member of her caste in Europe, has taken up duties entailed by the great conflict. The royalty of Europe is facing the realities of life in these troublous days, and the case of this little princess, lifted involuntarily from the life of the carefree and happy child to the sober and dutiful woman, is but the case of hundreds of her kind.

70,000 Dimes Reach Dead Letter Office at Washington When Uncle Sam Stops Mail to Minneapolis Swindler

The dimes at the Washington dead letter office.

The Janesville postoffice officials have received the following order from Acting Postmaster General J. C. Koon: With regard to the silk peddling fraud which has been conducted through the mails by swindlers at Minneapolis and which has claimed victims in Janesville as well as in hundreds of cities and towns of this state and the Northwest:

"Order No. 100959:
"It having been made to appear by evidence satisfactory to me that the National Mail Order Brokerage Exchange, at 520 Globe Bldg., Minneapolis, Minnesota, is conducting a scheme for obtaining money through the mails by means of false and fraudulent pretenses, representations, and promises, in violation of Sections 3929 and 4041 of the revised statutes, as amended, and that communications addressed to this concern are unprofitable in the meaning of Section 4 of the act of March 2, 1889 (Section 484, P. L. & C., 1913), all postmasters are hereby directed to withdraw from the mails all matter of any kind addressed to this concern and return the same to the sender where known, and where not known to send such matter to the Division of Dead Letters for proper disposition. Wherever possible, postmasters should refuse to receive such matter for mailing.

(Signed) J. C. Koon,
Acting Postmaster General.
The scheme which has been conducted by this concern consists in the sending out of circular letters in which a silk peddler worth $4.75 is promised to the addressee provided she will send 10c to the concern and send five exact copies of the letter received by her to five of her acquaintances. The promoters of the scheme have left Minneapolis and cannot be located, and many thousands of letters are now being received at the Minneapolis postoffice for this concern which cannot be delivered and which are being treated in accordance with the provisions of a fraud order issued against the firm in question.

Mail sacks containing some $7,000 in dimes enclosed in 70,000 letters are now piled up in the dead letter office at Washington.

U. S. MAKING GREAT MAP OF TERRITORY

Washington, November 13.—Rapid progress is being made by the United States in preparing its portion of the huge world map which was agreed upon in 1909 by nearly all the principal countries. By international agreement the authorities began preparing maps of the entire surface of the earth, to be published on a scale one-millionth of actual size, or about one inch to every sixteen miles. All the maps are to be uniform in shape and general appearance and are to have the same conventional signs.
To meet the popular demand in this country for state maps, the United States Geological Survey, which has charge of the making of the map, is preparing and publishing maps of each state on a larger scale than the world map sections. These state maps are twice the size or about one inch to every eight miles. A map of the entire United States, in one of the largest of the series, is now being published. It is a compilation of the maps every available source of information has been ransacked for material, and made public in any form have been prepared, so that the maps exceed in accuracy any heretofore published. The new world map measures 44 1/2 inches by 61 inches.
Copies of the State maps are sold to the public by the Government at nominal price.

WAUWATOSA AGGIES TRIM MILTON COLLEGE TEAM
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Milton, Nov. 13.—Milton College was defeated on their football field Thursday by the Wauwatosa Aggies. Much enthusiasm was aroused over the game, due largely to Prof. Stringer and Dr. Platts of Chicago. The college band led the students in a body from the campus to the gridiron. All were hopeful of victory, but realizing that the local eleven were experiencing a string team of longer conference than the college could boast, it seemed as if every man of both sides played his best. Milton failed mostly from lack of interference. Harding made the big gains for the Aggies by his end runs. Colman, their fullback, showed his class in his playing. Milton showed much improvement since their last game, but yielded to the farmers by a score of 18 to 0. The visitors during a kick goal on their last touchdown. Coach Spill commented the home team on their playing, and he is working towards victory with Platteville on Thanksgiving day.

NEWS NOTES—MOVIELAND

"Charity" is the title of a picture which will be released early next month. The photoplay makes an appeal in behalf of common justice and fairness. While it makes no pointed attack on any one institution, persons in every community are well aware that the contents of the picture are not founded on myth, but fact.
Mrs. Linda Griffith appears in the production in the leading feminine role, while also in the cast are Orestes Hale and Sheldon Lewis, two vastly popular screen performers. Both are known for their work in the superior productions of the studio, "The Clutching Hand" and "The Iron Claw."

The story follows the fortunes of two children of the slums, whose early lives were spent in a orphan asylum, run by a grasping capitalist. The terrible conditions that existed in the institution are told by a girl on the witness stand, while she is undergoing trial for the supposed murder of her child. The winch of the picture shows extensive improvements being made in the institution.

"STIRRING SERIES IN THE GARDEN OF ALLAH."
The attack by Bedouins upon a defenseless caravan in the Sahara is just one of a succession of stirring scenes in "The Garden of Allah," a motion picture production from the book written by Robert Hichens. Hundreds of the fierce desert Nomads are seen charging astride their Arab steeds upon the defenseless caravan. Soon all is over and we see the fierce tribesmen ridgeway with the heads of victims slain, decorating the ends of pikes. The charge of the Bedouins is but the exciting part of the most thrilling and colorful scenes ever taken by that master of screen direction, Colin Campbell.

Lou Tellegen, star, who has established the unenviable record of being hurt in every production in which he appears, declares that the only recompense for all these injuries is the tender solicitation and care which they elicit from wife Geraldine. Lou Tellegen's latest picture is "The Black Wolf," in which he very nearly lost his well-known, not to say, Grecian nose.

Creighton Hale.

He came by his dramatic ability naturally, since his ancestors for generations have been identified with the English stage. Mr. Hale came to this country some years ago, as a member of Lady Forbes Robertson's "The Dawn of Tomorrow," and shortly afterward entered moving pictures.

Pauline Frederick is to be shown next in a movie of the Canadian northwest, called "Nanette of the Wilds."

NEW MYERS THEATRE.

"War's Women."

One of the most dramatic situations ever conceived by a writer is found in "War's Women," the stirring photoplay production which comes to the New Myers theatre for two days, beginning Wednesday, Nov. 15. The setting is in a city which lies between two hostile armies. The citizens have raised a fund to give help to the army which they believe is contending for the right. The adversaries, receiving knowledge of this, sweep down on the little village and demand the fund. The citizens refuse to surrender this money, whereupon the general, at the suggestion of a malicious captain, threatens to deliver the women of the village to the ravages of his soldiers unless this money is forthcoming at a certain hour. The authorities of the city are torn between conflicting emotions. If they refuse to surrender the money, the helpless help of soldiers. If they give over the money, it may aid this same army in becoming victors and, in the end, subjecting the city to all the ignominies that the present situation threatens.

The solving of this problem in a happy manner is one of the difficult tasks undertaken by the writer of the story and he has done it in such a remarkable way that it will make a lasting and pleasing impression on the minds of all who see the picture.

This is but one of the many tense, dramatic situations that have been employed in the production of this masterpiece by the famous director, Thomas H. Ince.

Whitewater News

Whitewater, Nov. 13.—The Minnabodah invited the other clubs of the city and guests to a social at the Normal Saturday afternoon and there was a good attendance. Miss Potter told about the Sioux Indian legends that she had heard last August, the story being illustrated by moving pictures. It will be remembered that Mrs. Potter and daughter attended the Normal Saturday evening when the story of the Sioux Indians, known as the "lost sister of Wyoming," Frances Slocum was a great aunt of Mrs. Potter and was stolen when four years old by the Indians at Wilkesbarre, Pa. in 1778, and was not found until 1837 at Peru, Ind. The peasant was woven about the life of Miss Slocum beginning with her capture as a child in Pennsylvania, her life among the Miami Indians, her marriage to Deaf Man, the war chief, her identification by her brothers, and her refusal to return to civilization. The setting nature gave the peasant was wonderful. A moving picture was taken of the affair and produced at the Normal last Saturday.

The four months old child of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Landers died on Saturday at the home on State street. Mr. and Mrs. Francis Higgins returned Sunday afternoon after spend-

Heart and Home Problems

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson
Letters may be addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl sixteen years of age and in love with a man twenty-one.

We have gone together for a year and a half. I haven't any mother and father is a drunkard. I have a step-mother. We live on a big farm and I have to go ahead with all the work. They don't treat me right and I can't stand it to have them scold me. I am very tender-hearted. I go to my sweet-heart and tell him my troubles and he cheers me up, and says that better days are coming. We intended to get married the last Sunday in June, but his folks tried to get him to quit the way they do. So we didn't get married. My folks are talked about awfully bad, but I am a decent girl. I can do more than lots of girls at twenty. I act like a lady, too. His folks are church members and want to be nice. They have a girl and she has lots of trouble and is already counted low, but she does not know what she is talked about. I can't stand to have my friends tell me, and I am worrying and getting thin. He had another girl a while ago, but he didn't love her the way he does me. He said if he didn't go with her he couldn't go with anyone else. I wrote and told her she shouldn't go with him for my sake. Don't you think he is just tired going with me and wants to go with someone else? Once before he did the same thing, but he got over it.

His father is giving him a share in the farm. We could get a good start. If he quits me could I sue him for breach of promise? He hasn't the money yet, but will have it soon. He is his own boss. Don't you think he would do what he pleased?

WORRIED.
Both you and the boy are too young to think of marriage. It will be better for you to stay at home a few years longer or get work somewhere away from home. He probably is tired of going with just one girl and is entering a little change. He is right when he says that better times are coming, and so you should not take the matter too seriously and make up your mind to wait. There are other boys. Don't consider suing him for breach of promise. You surely do not want him to marry you unless he wants to very much. A breach of promise suit would bring your name up before the public and compromise you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been married once and my husband left me in 1905 and I have only heard from him once since and that was to tell me that he was going to get a divorce, but if he did or not I do not know. I heard the other day that he was dead, but I don't know whether it was true or not. I have another chance to get married. I want you to think it all right to get married again when I do not know anything about my husband. I am free am I not? MRS. WORRY.
You cannot get a divorce without any trouble. You better do that to be on the safe side.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am one of the few women who are deprived of motherhood. I am able to give a little one a comfortable home, and so I would like to adopt a babe at birth. Any information you can give me as to where and how I can get a babe like that will be more than appreciated. MRS. F. P. J.
Have a maternity hospital and several doctors on the lookout for a child for you. It would also be well to notify an orphan asylum.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Is there anything you can do to darken my eyebrows and lashes that is not harmful. I am a blond and have heavy enough eyebrows, but they are light. H. P. P.

HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

TEACHING THE TEACHERS TO TEACH.

Attention! The school child must give it five hours a day, or his time is wasted. It is spent in breathing foul air to his physical and mental detriment.

Attention means an alert mind. Attention is lost with carbon dioxide in short, fresh air. No human being can keep his attention fixed upon his work unless he has fresh air to breathe.

Too many teachers are "old women" at twenty or twenty-five. Too many boards of education are filled with old women in trousers. Too many school children are made ill by the air in their classrooms.

Medical school inspectors are ordering out too many tonsils and adenoids and ignoring the unhygienic conditions in the schoolroom, which cause the trouble.

Fresh air is the cheapest thing God Almighty makes, yet it is a scarce commodity in a great many public and private schoolrooms, because the authorities are afraid to admit it in the quantities necessary for health.

The chief danger to children in schoolrooms is from such contagious diseases as diphtheria, "cold" in the head, sore throat, diphtheria, measles, whooping cough and the like, so-called "children's diseases," because the poor kids had to first "catch on disease." All of these diseases prevail inversely as the ventilation of the schoolroom. In open air schoolrooms they are most common.

A great deal of the nervous fatigue of teachers—their ill temper, their "nervousness"—is due to the fact that they are working in a room where the air is so bad that it causes disease and the inattention of the children.

The Highflyers

"Marge, what is the meaning of this?" There was surprise and disgust in Tom's tone. He was sitting at the table going through the pile of bills that looked like a snowdrift. Marge dreaded the first of the month. She pretended not to hear, but continued to wind the damp locks of her hair around the curling iron. Her husband, Marge, was sitting at the table for a dinner. We never were there for dinner.

"Oh, that was the night you left me all alone here while you enjoyed yourself with your young friends. I loved you, Marge, and you loved me, but you never were there for dinner."

"Oh, that was the night you left me all alone here while you enjoyed yourself with your young friends. I loved you, Marge, and you loved me, but you never were there for dinner."

Mrs. Emma Wilkins' spirit of optimism remains undimmed today though she learned her husband died defending the Union Jack in Africa. When England entered Europe's war, she urged ten of her kin to join Canadian colors.

Household Hints

EGG SUBSTITUTES.
For a Medium-Sized Baking or Squash Pie, use four large or six small soda crackers. Roll fine as flour and add to other ingredients. The flavor will be rich and delicious and you will not miss the eggs. This is tried and true.

When Making a Cake or Muffins that require one or two eggs—instead of using eggs, use one teaspoon of baking powder for each egg and you will be surprised how nice your baking is. This is a saving since eggs are so high.

COOKIES.
These four recipes are cheap, yet never fail, are always good.

Drop Ginger Cookies—One cup sugar, one cup shortening, one cup molasses (any kind), one cup water, one tablespoon ginger, one egg, two scant teaspoons soda, four cups flour, sifted. Drop with teaspoon on greased in and bake in hot oven.

White Cookies—Two cups sugar, one cup lard, one cup sour milk, one teaspoon baking powder, one level teaspoon soda dissolved in sour milk, two eggs, one tablespoon flavoring, four enough to roll, one large cup nut meats rolled in and bake.

Roll Oats Cookies—One and one-half cups sugar, one cup shortening, one and one-half cups raisins, one egg, two cups rolled oats, two cups flour, one teaspoon soda, one cup sour milk.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.
Mock Squab (for four people). Four slices of veal cut from the loin, half an inch thick, about seven inches long, and four wide. Make a force meat of crumbs, fat pork and mushrooms, seasoned with onion juice and a little lemon juice. Moisten with a beaten egg. Cover each slice of meat with the force meat, roll up tightly and tie with twine. Dress with salt pepper and flour. Cover and roast fifteen minutes to the pound. Be careful that they do not brown too much (they should be a golden brown). When nearly done, add rich milk to almost cover and let simmer about ten minutes or until quite tender. Remove strings, arrange "squabs" on toast, garnish with parsley and pour a little of the strained milk over each. The mushrooms may be omitted.

Mexican Chicken Dish (for six people).—One chicken, one cup raisins, one cup onion, one cup bell peppers, salt, pepper, half cup butter, two cups chicken broth. Cut up chicken and stew until tender. Put rice in two cups, add water, salt and pepper. Pour over this the chicken broth and bake three hours. Serve with sour cream.

Queen of All Cranberry Pies.—Cranberries, two cups; chopped raisins, one-half cup; water, three cups; sugar, one cup; butter, one tablespoon; lemon juice, one teaspoon; whipped cream, one cup; walnut meats, one-half cup. Wash cranberries, put them into sauce pan with raisins, water and three-fourths cup sugar. Cook slowly until thick, then add butter and lemon juice. Turn into pastry-lined pie tin and bake until ready, in moderate oven. Whip up cream, add salt and use for decorating top of the pie. Serve, garnished with the nut meats. This recipe will take the place of a pudding, instead of making hot mix and puddings for the coming holidays.

One-Egg Cake—One tablespoon butter, one scant cup sugar, one-half cup milk, one egg, well beaten, one cup flour, one-half cup raisins, one-half teaspoon baking powder (level). Will keep moist for several days. You can use lard instead of butter, water instead of milk, but lemon juice will not keep cake moist quite so long as milk. This recipe is excellent made into gems; makes a pan of nine nice gems.

Carrot Mashed Carrots, two cups sugar, one-half cup orange juice, one tablespoon lemon juice, one teaspoon salt, one dozen blanched almonds, put through meat chopper. Add sugar and one cup water. Boil thirty minutes. Add orange and lemon juice, and add at the very last. Pour into glasses; cover with paraffin.

Killing the Calves

All sorts of excuses are offered for the high price of beef, the most plausible being the alleged demand for veal—"the killing of calves which should be allowed to grow into regular beef." You cannot have beef if you eat it as "veal", but you can have Shredded Wheat Biscuit which contains more real nutriment than beef and costs much less. Shredded wheat biscuit is the whole wheat steam-cooked, shredded and baked. Make it your "meat" for ten days and see how much better you feel. Wholesome and strengthening for any meal with milk or cream or in combination with fruits. Made at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

THEY DIDN'T SPEAK.

An acquaintance of mine has just lost an excellent position in an office because she refused to speak with one of the other workers.

They quarreled a few weeks ago and after the quarrel they "didn't speak." Their employer said that they were "unpleasant" and "unfriendly" and finally the disagreeable atmosphere got on his nerves, and he told the two women they must be pleasant to each other or leave. My acquaintance left.

"I Never Get Over It."
She told me about it afterwards. "When I get good and mad at anyone," she said, "I don't ever get over it."

"Didn't you hate to leave?" said I.
"Oh, yes," she said, "it was a good place, but I said I'd never speak to Emma again, and I wasn't going to for anybody."

She tossed her head. It was evident that she was very proud of her vindictive spirit. I don't believe the original offense that caused the quarrel still bothers her. I think she sticks it out because she visualizes herself as she appears to others.

She Enjoys Picturing Herself as Vindictive.
She fancies people saying "When she gets mad she stays mad."

And with a queer, perverted pride she enjoys the picture.

That is her ideal of herself. She would sacrifice much (I happen to know, that in leaving this position, she sacrificed more than she knew) to live up to it.

What a good friend and what a bad enemy pride is!

It is a back stuffer. It helps you faithfully to live up to your ideal of yourself. But you must be careful what that ideal is.

People often hold that ideal of vindictiveness. They brag of never speaking with pride of quarreling with quondam friends and never having anything to do with them again. They seem to think

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Nov. 13.—There are 217 teachers in the state who are receiving annuities from the teachers' insurance and retirement fund, according to the report which has just been compiled by R. E. Loveland, secretary of the board.

The fund is estimated to have earned an annual interest of 4.56 percent. Since the law was enacted 221 pension certificates have been issued to teachers. There are not now in force three women and one man having died and four women and two men having returned to teaching.

The total amount of cash resources in the fund is $420,413.07, of which $411,413.07 is invested in bonds earning an annual interest of 4.56 percent. During the past year the receipts to the fund have been $167,447.56. There has been paid out for administration expenses during the year $5,855.10 and annuities, $72,734.56.

The fund has two main sources of income. The state pays into the fund 10 cents a year for each child of school age in the state. During the past year this amounted to $66,583. The teachers themselves contribute to the fund.

During the school year there were 15,400 teachers in the public schools outside of Milwaukee, of which 13,663 were women and 1,734 men. Of the women teachers, 1,170 were assessed 2 percent, $,830 were assessed 1 percent, while 1,020 were not assessed. Of the men teachers, 220 were assessed 2 percent, 1,020 were assessed 1 percent, while 430 were not assessed.

From Sept. 1, 1915 to Sept. 1, 1916 there was received as assessments from teachers, $83,836.97; and since Sept. 1 an addition $15,000 has been received.

Teachers who have taught a term of twenty years or more may receive the benefits of the fund by paying up the amount they would have paid had they contributed in the years of service. During the past year forty-two new annuitants have been added to the lists, paying a balance into the fund of $13,243.00. Three additional teachers have retired a second time, bringing the total up to forty-five. Of this total 17 retired from the country schools.

GERMANS FORCE MEN OF GHENT TO WORK IN MUNITION PLANTS.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
The Hague, Netherlands, Nov. 13.—About 2,000 unemployed in the Belgian city of Ghent have been deported to Germany for work in munition factories, according to news from the frontier. A compulsory registration of unemployed took place a few days since, and the present labor compulsion, the second of the kind, has been imposed on employees of various engineering works at Ghent who gave no heed to the call, were seized in their beds at night by German soldiers and thrown into prison, it is alleged.

Other instances of the imposition of forced labor have recently occurred also at Brussels, Eekloo, Allign, Ghent, and other places. All signs indicate that Germany is determined, as far as possible, to utilize the considerable available supply of Belgian labor to make good the ever increasing military drain on its own manpower.

MANY EMPTY FLATS CONSPICUOUS IN BERLIN.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin, Nov. 13.—For every thousand houses, with or without attached stores, in Berlin, no less than sixty-six stand empty as a result of the war, according to statistics compiled by the Statistical Bureau of Greater Berlin.

The great majority of the empty houses are flats with one and two rooms in addition to kitchen and bath. The majority live in the north, east and south sections of Berlin, where the poorer portion of the population lives.

The total number of empty buildings now has reached 39,863, in 1916, as against 27,809 in December, 1913.

Interesting Machine.
The most interesting perpetual motion machine, was the clock built by James Cox, a London Jeweler, in the eighteenth century. This was made self-winding by a barometer attachment arranged to rotate a cogwheel in such a manner that whether the mercury rose or fell the wheel always revolved in the same direction and kept the clock weight always wound up. The clock difficulty Cox had to overcome was to prevent overwinding. This he accomplished by a device that caused the cogwheel to throw itself out of gear when the weight was wound nearly to the top.

PRISONERS GET "DOPE" FROM COUGH REMEDY

Sheriff Finds Drug Victims' Novel Source of Supply

Many so-called cough cures offered to the public are heavily loaded with chloroform, opium, morphine, cocaine and other narcotic drugs to such an extent that several prisoners of the Suffolk County jail at Boston got the drug; their appetite craved by pretending to the sheriff that they had severe coughs, according to the Boston Post of June 7, 1916.

These dangerous habit-forming drugs do have a temporary effect on the cough but they do not have a lasting effect and soon the cough comes back worse than ever. Doctors sound a warning against these preparations. A safe, sane treatment for a cough or cold is Father John's Medicine because it is guaranteed free from any of these dangerous drugs or alcohol and has a record of more than sixty years' success as a family remedy in thousands of homes. Because of its wholesome purity it is safe for all the family. It soothes the throat and breathing passages, relieves the cough by getting at the cause, drives out the impurities by means of its gentle laxative effect and builds up renewed strength because of its wholesome food elements.

"Quite right, Miss Dupont," said Hardy.
"You mean, you won't leave?" asked Dupont.
"How can he?" Vandervyn smoothly cut in. "You've put it up to him that it would be deserting his post under fire. He's an army officer—he wouldn't leave now even if he knew his staying here meant certain massacre for us all, followed by certain massacre of the tribe by the troops."

"I will remain until I have made at least one more effort to pacify the tribe," replied Hardy. "You are at liberty to resign whenever you please."

"It Will Be Hard to Talk Them Out of Their Strange Dislike for You."

Mr. Dupont has ample time to remove his goods and his daughter from the reservation.

"Not me," declared Marie. "I don't care what Fere and Reggie say. I know there is not one of the tribe who would harm me, even in an outbreak."

"Well, maybe not," admitted her father.

"I gather that I am the only person who seems to be endangered," remarked Hardy. "This being so, I will wait a few days for the excitement to subside, and will then call another council."

"They won't come again to meet you," predicted Dupont.

"Then I shall go to them."

"Into the mountains, captain?" exclaimed Marie, her splendid eyes widening with concern. "Surely you will not venture among the camps."

"The tribe must learn that I mean friendship."

Dupont paused to scratch the side of his head. But Vandervyn spoke without an instant's hesitancy. "You have no right to throw your life away uselessly, captain. Suppose Charlie and I make a trip to the camps, to see if we cannot quiet the tribe and talk the chiefs into giving you another hearing? If you have no objection, we could tell them that you cannot leave just now, but that you will do so as soon as you have tried to benefit them."

"And that Mr. Van'll be next agent," added Dupont.

"Will you tell them that I am here to help them and to be their friend?" queried Hardy.

"Trust me to put it to them strong, captain," assured Vandervyn. "I know you'll play fair by resigning in my favor as soon as you have the tribe in hand."

"After I have done what I can do to improve conditions among them," qualified Hardy.

"I do so hope Mr. Van can persuade them to be friendly with you," said Marie. "I know he and Charlie will be perfectly safe. But it will be hard to talk them out of their strange dislike to you. When will you start, Reggie?"

"Early tomorrow morning, if the captain has no objections."

"The sooner the better," agreed

Hardy.
"I'll go and remove my council costume," said Vandervyn, smiling at his irrepressible frock coat.

Marie and her father rose with him. Hardy bowed out the girl and returned to his desk. He was deep in the midst of a report on the tribe when, half an hour later, Vandervyn returned to the office in his riding togs.

"Charlie may not come back this afternoon," he remarked. "I thought I might ride down and tell him about the trip. I could fetch your mare for you."

"Very well. I shall be obliged," replied Hardy, and he returned to his study of the report.

Vandervyn rode down along the far side of the stream, keeping the thickets as much as possible between himself and the Dupont house. He did not recross the creek until he was opposite Redbear's home. He found the cabin door closed. But at a slight movement of the window curtains his hand went up to beckon with a lordly gesture. There was a short pause. Then the door opened a scant inch.

"Hello!" he said. "Where's your brother?"

"He has—has gone to tell the police families."

"On the agent's mare," guessed Vandervyn.

"Please—he didn't mean any harm—please don't tell on him."

"That depends," replied Vandervyn. "Do you think I care to favor him when you act as if you hate me?"

"Hate? No, no!" The door opened several inches and as suddenly closed to a narrow crack.

But Vandervyn had caught a glimpse of the girl's blushing face. His voice dropped to a caressing tone: "You're not afraid of me, are you, just because I wanted a kiss? Come out here and talk. I won't bite you."

"You promise not to—kiss me?"

"Not unless you wish me to."

"But—but I do!" came back the naive confession.

Impulsively he started to swing off his pony. The cabin door shut with a bang. He straightened in the saddle, waited a long moment, frowned heavily, and started to ride away.

From the window came a plaintive cry: "Oh, please, please!"

He deliberately dismounted, flung the reins over his horse's head, and walked to the opened window. The eager, frightened face within blushed scarlet and shrank back. He stopped short.

"See here," he admonished, "if you're going to be silly, I shall go away for good. You've got the door barred, and you know I shall not try to crawl in at a hole like this."

"I—I won't be," she faltered.

"That's better," he said, and he reached in to slip his arm around her trembling shoulders.

Shrinking yet yielding, with eyes timidly downcast and olive cheeks burning with blissful shame, the young girl allowed him to draw her closer. Her lips quivered, yet she raised them to meet his kiss.

"There!" he rallied. "Was it so dreadful?"

She did not answer; she could not. Her head drooped forward with the instinctive modesty of an innocent young girl. He put the forefinger of his free hand under her chin and raised her head to take a second kiss.

"One good turn deserves another, sweetheart," he said.

"You should not—not call me that," she whispered. "You are a gentleman white man; I am only a halfbreed—I'm yellow as a Chinaman."

"No—golden. You are my golden girl. Your cheeks are wild roses and honey gold. Your eyes are like a fawn's; your lips sweet as honey—Another kiss—There, that's more like it. You're learning how. Now look at me."

She raised her drooping lids with the sudden, desperate courage of one who is very shy, and gazed up at him. Her tender eyes starlike with the soft glow of her love and adoration.

"You—you really like me?" she whispered.

"No, I hate you like poor Lo hates dewwater. Give him a taste, and he wants it all. I want you."

"Charlie—he said I must marry a white man. I am joyed in my heart—You say you want me! But I am only a halfbreed girl, and you—"

"You're my money-sweet girl. Go and open the door."

She looked up at him again full and direct, and his gaze sank before the trust in her clear eyes.

"You want me to be your engaged girl!" she murmured. "When people are engaged, they are going to be married. Charlie said I must marry a white man, a good white man. You are kind to me. It is wonderful. I have read that even army officers have married halfbreed girls. But you are grander than any officer, and you are very good to think of marrying me."

Vandervyn forced a smile, and replied to her adulation without meeting her enraptured gaze.

"What else did you think I meant when I kissed you? Of course we shall be married. As we are here on the reservation, it will be according to the custom of the tribe."

"Married? Oh, my heart sings!" cried the girl. "I will be your wife—yours! I can't believe it—There comes Charlie. I must run and tell him."

Vandervyn hastily released her, and drew his arm out of the window as he looked around.

"Wait!" he commanded. "He's coming fast enough. Leave the door barred."

The halfbreed was racing Hardy's mare up the creek bank at a furious gallop. He flung himself out of the saddle and advanced upon Vandervyn, his face dark with suspicion.

"What you saying to my sister?" he demanded.

The white man met his threatening look with a half-contemptuous, half-amused smile.

"I've been showing the girl what I think of her," he replied.

Redbear came to a sudden halt. The muscles of his face began to twitch.

"Oh, Charlie!" reproached Olina. "What makes you look at him that way? Why don't you thank him?"

She unbarred the door and stepped outside.

"For what?" questioned her brother in a harsh, strained voice.

"Because he is going to be my man—going to take me for his wife."

"Marry you? Olina—you?" The halfbreed could not believe his ears. Through his daze shot a flash of angry suspicion. "But you—you won't marry her!"

Vandervyn smiled in his careless manner.

"Oh, I guess yes."

"You'll marry her? You'll take her to town and marry her like white people?"

"I'll marry her as some white people marry. I'll take her to town. Olina and I have agreed to be married according to tribal custom."

Again Redbear's weak face darkened with suspicion and anger. "I won't have it. You're white, and Olina is half white. White people don't marry Indian fashion."

"You know a lot about it, Charlie. Haven't you ever heard of common-law marriages? Lots of white people get married that way."

"What way?"

"You must know about it. Instead of going to a lot of fuss and bother over ministers and licenses, many people just take each other for husband and wife and go to housekeeping."

"Is—is that a real white people's marriage?" asked Olina.

Vandervyn frowned. "You don't think I'm lying, do you? Why, you often see in the newspapers about common-law wives getting their share of their dead husbands' estates, just the same as if they had gone through all the fuss of weddings. Ask Hardy if that does not often happen."

"Well, if it's a real marriage—"

muntered Redbear.
"Of course it is, Charlie, if he says so!" cried Olina rapturously.

Her brother's face glowed with sudden uncontrolled exultance. He stammered almost incoherently: "Then you—Marie—you don't marry—don't marry Marie?"

"No," replied Vandervyn, and his voice rang clear. "I have no intention of marrying her."

"Maybe Marie'll like me now, when I tell her you are going to be my brother," sighed Redbear.

Vandervyn laid a brotherly hand on his shoulder. "Hold on, boy!" he said. "You let me manage things. You know that Marie thinks she likes me. But now Hardy is here, and he wants her. If she hears that I have thrown her over, she will run off with him."

"She don't like him."

"What if she doesn't? He's an army officer. He has money, and when he goes from here he will wear his uniform, all gilt and spangles. You know how the girls like that. No—I tell you there's not the ghost of a show for you until he is out of the way. Our little bluff didn't work. He says he is going to stay. So for a while you and Olina must keep still about the marriage. Tomorrow morning you and I are going into the mountains to talk with the chiefs. Olina will go with me. But it must be understood at the agency that you have sent her to—Who could you send her to?"

"Ti-ova-konza is our mother's father. Not even Mr. Dupont knows that," said Redbear. "Before he came here, she ran off with a bad white man. They went to the Blackfeet. After a time he got an arrow through his back. My mother came home. Ti-ova-konza would not see her face. She had to work for the agent till they made us go away to school. Then she died."

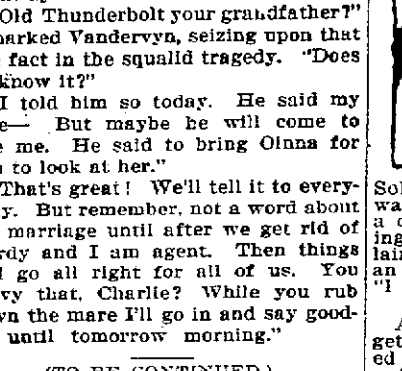

"Old Thunderbolt your grandfather?" remarked Vandervyn, seizing upon that one fact in the squalid tragedy. "Does he know it?"

"I told him so today. He said my face—But maybe he will come to like me. He said to bring Olina for him to look at her."

"That's great! We'll tell it to everybody. But remember, not a word about the marriage until after we get rid of Hardy and I am agent. Then things will go all right for all of us. You savvy that, Charlie? While you rub down the mare I'll go in and say good-bye until tomorrow morning."

Rossini tells the following story of Paganini's stinginess: One night after a very successful concert, he gave the cabman who drove him to his hotel one franc. The cabman well knew who Paganini was and, looking at the solitary piece of money, he said appealingly: "Maestro, you have delighted all Paris tonight. You have earned thousands of francs with your violin, and yet you give me only one solitary franc?" "Yes," replied the violinist, "but I played on one string. When you can drive me home on one wheel I will give you more."

Doctor Recommended Operation for Gall Stone Trouble But Mother Objected.

In her work as an evangelist in the mountain districts of West Virginia, Mrs. Mary A. Ferree, who lives at 1964 Madison Ave., Huntington, W. V., was frequently called on to relieve suffering among her charges and became familiar with the practical value of remedies easily available. When her daughter became ill and the doctor finally said the trouble was gall stones and that an operation was necessary, Mrs. Ferree would not consent. In a letter to the Pinus Laboratories she says, "After four doctors had treated my daughter, and we had tried various remedies without avail, I heard of Fruitola and Traxo and tried it as a last resort. The first dose brought immediate relief and after using three bottles of Fruitola and two bottles of Traxo she was entirely cured. I pray that my testimony may be the means of helping others to health."

Fruitola and Traxo are compounded from the original Edsall formulas at the Pinus Laboratories in Monticello, Ill., and can be purchased in Janesville of J. P. Baker, 123 W. Milwaukee street, a doctor's prescription is not necessary. Fruitola is a pure fruit oil that acts as an intestinal lubricant and disintegrates the hardened particles that cause so much suffering, discharging the accumulated waste to the sufferer's intense relief. One dose is usually sufficient to indicate its efficacy. Traxo is a tonic-alternative that is most effective to rebuild and restore the weakened rundown system.

A. F. OF L. IN SESSION

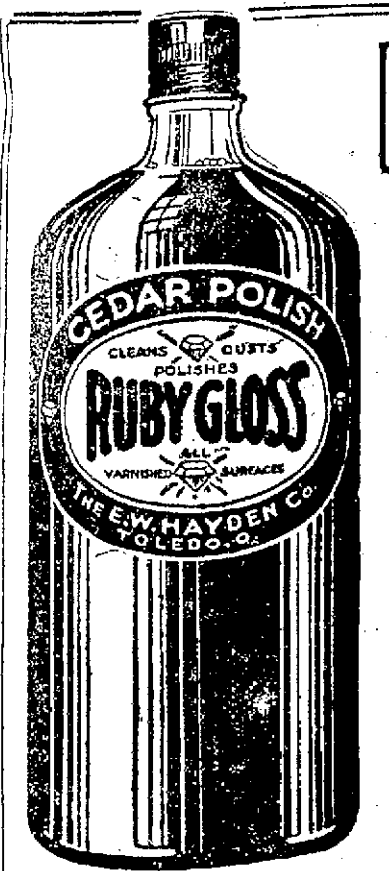

Executive Council Today Opens Ses-

Forty-Five Federations.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 13.—Organized labor's activities in the field of legislation, international politics and domestic affairs during the last year were set forth at length in the annual report of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, presented here today to the federation's sixty-sixth annual convention.
The membership of the federation is given at 2,071,036 on Sept. 30, the close of the fiscal year, an increase of about 125,000 over the previous year and of more than 1,500,000 in the nineteen years of its existence. There are 1,711 local unions in the federation and 45 state federations. Receipts for the year are shown at $404,407 with a cash balance at its close of $50,000.

The report closes with a plea to workers to continue their efforts for better conditions through organization and co-operation.
There are opening up before the labor movement," it says, "tremendous opportunities to mold and influence the foundations of economic, social and political organization. It is fitting to call attention to our well known slogan which represents the way by which present progress was achieved—Agitate! Educate! Organize!—much has already been achieved through organization and the efforts of just beginning to realize the great opportunities that lie before them; only through better and stronger organization can all enter that heritage.

"It is but fitting that we should express our deep appreciation of the respect and confidence manifested to the organization by the great rank and file of America and by the liberty-loving people of the continent. Never in history has now there existed such feeling and spirit of unity, solidarity and fraternal unity. It all augurs well not only for the well being of the workers of our own time but all the people for all time."

In discussing international relations the report speaks of the effort to have a world labor congress held at the time and place of the holding of a world peace congress at the end of the European war and the rejection of the suggestion by organized labor in Great Britain and Germany, which "necessarily requires that our proposition be abandoned." This attitude led to the adoption of this suggestion by the council.

"Since the first proposal submitted by the A. F. of L. to the labor organizations of Europe has been definitely rejected by them, what is the status of the organized labor movements of those countries that shall participate in the general peace conference to determine terms and conditions of peace at the close of the war? Shall we urge upon their respective governments that the wage earners shall be represented in an official commission from their respective countries. The same policy ought to be followed by organized labor movements of neutral countries if it shall be determined that neutral countries
also will participate in the general peace conference. Thus, representatives would be seated with other representatives of the nations in general conferences connected with the formulation of peace terms. In this way the ideals and aims of wage earners would be presented and considered by the general official body."

In discussing Pan-American labor relations the report details conferences at Washington and Baltimore between President Gompers and other officers of the American Federation and representatives of organized labor in Mexico when the relations between the two countries were "most critical."
The report suggests that a Pan-American federation "is not only possible
but necessary."

When conditions had arisen that seemed to make war between the United States and Mexico inevitable," continues the report, "the understanding between the labor movements of the United States and Mexico together with the American Federation of Labor and the Mexican Federation of Instrumental in throwing light upon the influences and the agents that were trying to create war sentiment and the country for the purpose of making in the affairs of Mexico, and was able to help bring about an adjustment of misunderstandings without resorting to war."

The report details the conference and tells of the ultimatum sent to General Carranza by the United States demanding immediate release of American soldiers captured at Carranza.

"It was at this time," the report goes on, "that a request was made to President Gompers that he make a personal appeal to General Carranza to release the United States soldiers and to ask him to release the name of common justice and humanity and a better understanding between the two countries and to avoid the horrors of war was realized and the report goes on to say that "that same evening extra papers announced General Carranza had issued an order releasing the American soldiers."

The conference, the report says,
led to an understanding which made more general the feeling that the people of Mexico knew what they wanted, understood their peculiar problems and had a right to work out their own salvation in accord with their own ideals."

Reviewing anti-trust and injunction regulation the report says:
"The enactment of the labor provisions of the Clayton anti-trust act has forced employers who wish to use anti-trust legislation and the injunctive process to assist them in defeating the efforts of employees to secure higher wages and better conditions of work to transfer their efforts from federal to state courts. The result makes increasingly important the necessity for the enactment of state laws to prevent the abuse of judicial agencies and the perversion of legislation to exclusive service in behalf of employers. The uses to which writs of injunction and anti-trust legislation have been put have made them virtually strike-breaking institutions and union-destroying agencies. Such a condition is subversive to proper respect of our governmental institutions and to the republic itself."

Such a condition the report says resulted in the framing of a model anti-trust and injunction limitation bill, presented to the San Francisco federation convention and urged by it upon central organizations and the rank and file to be insisted upon as proper laws.
Decisions of courts favorable and unfavorable to the contentions of labor are reviewed, some emphasis being laid upon a decision of the supreme court of Massachusetts holding unconstitutional a state law which was taken by the federation as its first model in the endeavor to protect wage-earners from "the perverted application of anti-trust legislation and from the abuse of the writ of injunction."

The decision the report says, is based on the theory that "labor is property" which it asserts is a dogma in ruling and based upon past decisions of judges. The court is confronted with the making proper investigation in deciding such a case and its methods are characterized as "un-scholarly, unscientific, and out of harmony with the purposes of real justice." The report says the executive council will consider the case to determine whether further steps may be taken.

In connection with decisions affecting labor by federal courts the report refers to the noted Danbury Hatters' case.

"The great wrong that was done in the Danbury Hatters' case," it says,
"may be eradicated after long years."
The aged, infirm Danbury hatters have been ordered to pay the Shoykoff award claimed by the Anti-Boycott association. The shadow of the Hatters' case which for years hung like a threatening pall over the labor movement still has power to menace.

"The decision of the United States supreme court in 1912 established a precedent which judges are trying to make law, although the highest law-making body of the country—the agency to which the nation delegated that function—has enacted legislation to remedy the great wrongs done by the decision. Justice, hampered by the judiciary, works slowly and in devious ways."

The report says a decision by the United States circuit court of appeals in the case of A. S. Dawd against the United Mine Workers of America begun six weeks before the Clayton law was enacted and involving operation of Arkansas coal mines, "seeks to river upon wage-earners the precedent of the Hatters' case "and to carry that interpretation to even greater lengths of injustice."

The report says the court laid down
the principle that an employer's responsible body could be sued for threefold damages alleged to have been caused by striking miners and that a strike may be an interference with interstate commerce, and all members of the union, whether in the strike or not,
become liable for damages.

"The decision is an example of colossal injustice," continues the report.
"If that decision is allowed to become part of the law of this country it will result in the destruction of unionism."
The United States court of appeals for the Eighth circuit has endeavored to elude the purposes of the Clayton anti-trust act and to discredit it. The decision of the court is in conflict with the laws of the land, is at variance with the ethical concepts of the citizens of the United States and with the facts of life and work.
It is a dangerous condition in our republic when judges who exercise discretionary and almost irresponsible power can suspend the laws of the land and rule contrary to the wishes and judgment of citizens."

"This one thing must be settled soon: Will judges regard and lean the primer of human liberty or will they devote their ability and mentality to the service of winning cases for men of wealth and line up with the plotters of the predatory interests of the country?"

Speaking of the eight hour law passed by congress to avert the recently threatened railroad strike, the report says: "For nearly a century the labor movement of America has conducted a campaign for the establishment of a maximum eight hour work day, and characteristically the legislation by congress as a notable movement." It says the eight hour law was established "as a primary step in conserving the lives and the working power of wage-earners."

In taking the position that the principle of the eight hour day should be conceded as a right that ought not be arbitrated, the report says: "Neither brotherhoods rejected the principle of arbitration as the railroad presidents have wrongly claimed. Those matters are arbitrable and which concern property and property rights."

Discussing President Wilson's proposals for legislation the report says an essential feature was the creation of compulsory governmental institutions to regulate industrial relations in an occupation not owned or operated by the government itself. It is a revolutionary proposition totally out of harmony with our prevailing institutions and out of harmony with our philosophy of government."

"The wage-earners of the United States will oppose any proposition to impose on them compulsory institutions which disguise involuntary servitude. They hold that the principle involved in voluntary institutions is the key to personal liberty, industrial freedom and that this principle is of more importance to them than any other consideration. Involuntary and compulsory labor once enforced, even for a single hour, will not halt at its temporary enforcement but will go on and become permanent."

A splendid record of achievement in legislation, through activities of the Federation by "positive participation in notices for the purpose of securing the election of those in favor of the aims of the labor movement and the defeat of those who had demonstrated their hostility to the cause of labor" is set forth in detail.
In connection with proposed vocational education legislation the report

MONTANA TOWN HAS THE TALLEST STACK

World's tallest smoke stack.

It is on the great smelter of the Great Falls, Montana. It is 506 feet in height and 78 feet in diameter at the base. On the inside at the base it is 66 feet in diameter and 50 feet in diameter at the top. Its weight is 24,000,000 pounds.

recommends that an board created to administer such a law be non-partisan in character and represent agriculture, labor, commerce, industry and education and that it not be permitted to "become a mere political adjunct of the party in power."

The right of labor to participation in matters affecting it is insisted upon with the statement: "The basis for representation and participation in the affairs of organized society is man, not property. The workers, the masses of the people, therefore, have a right to participate and will insist upon this participation in the determination and control of all that concerns their lives and the lives of generations to come."

Objection to government censorship of moving pictures is registered on the ground that it would interfere with proper freedom of expression and action, and the rank and file of the federation is asked to support this view.
The opposition of the organization to compulsory social insurance is detailed as requiring something to be done for workers constituting themselves for themselves and maintaining their own institutions.

UNDERGROUND CITIES OF FEUDAL DAYS NOW DEFENSES OF GERMAN

With the French Armies On the Somme, Nov. 13.—While the cave warfare which has been adopted by the Germans is their latest style of defensive tactics, it is being even more facilitated at the southern extremity of the Franco-British offensive by the existence of caves dug by the Hugonots, it is being even more facilitated at the northern extremity of the "big push" by the existence of entire underground villages.

The caves, cellars and vaults, dug by the Hugonots in the province of Santerre, both for refuge and for concealing their valuables, date back to the religious wars which were waged in France several centuries ago. The subterranean villages in the northern part of Picardy are of more antiquity and go back to feudal times.

As a rule they are dug into solid rock, and the French general staff has reason to believe that their existence was not only long ago known to the Germans, but long ago counted upon by the German general staff as a definite means for clinging onto the soil of France.

There is now every reason to believe that the series of underground villages in Picardy is to be utilized largely by the Germans in constituting a new line of defense against the Franco-British drive that has now pushed them entirely out of their three line trench defenses which they had regarded as absolutely unbreakable.

By a combination of circumstances, the immense navigable canal which was being dug in the northern part of France when the war began, and which was to have been one of France's greatest inland waterways, skirts the district of underground villages on the west and constitutes an additional asset to the Germans for their new line of defense. This canal, starting from Peronne, where it was to connect with the Somme canal already in existence, traverses the northern half of the pathway of the allies' offensive, cutting the Bapaume-Cambrai road near Hovine court.

At the moment war was declared this canal was practically completed and ready to have the water turned in. At the foot of Mount Saint Quentin the French have already reached the banks of this canal, and it has been ascertained that the Germans are utilizing the big ditch for their new line of defense. This does not constitute a serious fact for the French general staff, as it is of course in possession of all the details of the canal's construction. What it does regret, however, is that its occupation by the Germans will unquestionably force its complete destruction by the Allies heavy artillery and the time and millions of francs spent in its construction will be entirely wiped out.

Along the line of this canal are also to be found the underground villages of feudal times which it is now known are being organized by the Germans with machine guns for a final resistance. One of the most famous of these subterranean villages is at Hiermes, on the banks of the canal. The village is dug in the solid rock, and consists of 115 chambers with 800 alcoves. The entrance to this village is under the cover of the church and its foundation by the Germans will of course entail the destruction of the entire church edifice by the allies' artillery. Other similar underground villages are to be found in the valley of the Exuette, traversed also by the canal, and at Ypres. Getting the Germans out of these subterranean villages is not considered a serious problem by the French general staff.

A Mechanical Masseur.

A machine has been invented for the purpose of reducing weight. It weighs but 235 pounds and has only 48 roller wheels hung on an oscillating frame to travel over the human body from the knees to the neck. After one has undergone treatment at the hands of this mechanical monster, falling under the wheels of railroad cars no longer contains an element of danger.—Popular Science Monthly.

O'Leary of the Chicago Association of Commerce and responses by delegates from various states. Preceding the session of the congress the were sectional and committee meetings.

Special attention will be devoted by the convention to the relation of federal laws and mining rights on public lands and the question will be discussed by the mine owners, and officials, government industrial experts and governors of a number of states who are attending the meeting.

Colonel George Pope of Hartford, Conn., is scheduled to deliver, at a banquet which will close the convention Thursday evening, a detailed survey of the relations of capital and labor.

Among the reports to be made to the convention are the report of the committee on relations with the federal trade commission, Wednesday morning, the report of the committee on forest relations Thursday morning, the report of the committee on workmen's compensation on Tuesday afternoon, and the report of the committee on revision of mineral land laws on Thursday afternoon.

JOHN A. AYLWARD DIES SUDDENLY AT MADISON

PROMINENT LEADER IN DEMOCRATIC PARTY AND ABLE LAWYER SUCCEUMS.

WORKED WAY TO TOP

Starting Out As Section Hand He Worked His Way Through University and Law School.

Justice of the supreme court of Wisconsin.

Soon after, Joseph E. Davies, now chairman of the federal trade commission, joined the firm, which then became Aylward, Davies and O'Brien. This firm was continued until Mr. Davies' recent appointment to the federal trade commission.

This Mr. Aylward has had twenty-five years of varied practice in the law as an active member of one of the leading law firms of the state. Aylward had long been one of the most active lawyers in the state. Few lawyers have had his experience in the preparation and trial of cases before the jury, and in the interior and appellate courts. Mr. Aylward was a member of the State and National Bar association.

For fifteen years of his practice, Mr. Aylward was city attorney of Madison, Wisconsin. This position was elective by the city council, which was sometimes democratic and sometimes republican. The council's appreciation of his services is shown by the gradual increase of his salary from $600 to $2,100 per year.

This work was carried on in connection with his regular work. It was of a varied nature involving a number of important cases for the city.

Tried Important Cases.

Among these were: The American Sanitary Engineering company, 118 Wis. 450.

In this case, Mr. Aylward, as city attorney, had prepared the ordinance and contract for the installation of a city sewerage disposal plant by the defendant. Upon its failure to work satisfactorily, Mr. Aylward brought suit to recover the money paid by the city and recovered in full.

The city of Madison vs. Madison Gas & Electric company, 125 Wis. 243.

When it was determined that the state had the right to regulate the rates and services of the different public utilities, and to confer this power on the different cities of the state, this led to the establishment of our national rate commission.

The city of Madison vs. Madison Gas & Electric company. This was a case before the state supreme court, in which Mr. Aylward represented the city to regulate charges and services for gas and electric current in the city under the new public utility law, and to determine the different elements the commission should consider as a basis for rates and service.

The city of Madison vs. Southern Wisconsin Railway company, 150 Wis. 23.

This was a suit instituted by Mr. Aylward to compel the local traction company to pave its right-of-way to make the pavement correspond with the rest of the city. The city had been ordered to do this by the state supreme court, but the company refused to do so. Mr. Aylward insisted that it was the company's duty to do this work, and commenced the suit for this purpose. The suit was subsequently tried by his successor, and his position vindicated.

Mr. Aylward defended the city in a large number of personal injury cases and was uniformly successful.

Among these was: Benson vs. City of Madison, 101 Wis. 312.

This was a personal injury suit brought and tried by Senator La Follette, whose law offices were directly across the hall from Mr. Aylward's. The senator was successful in winning a verdict in the lower court, but upon appeal, the city was successful.

Defended Ekern.

State ex rel vs. Francis E. McGovern, 164 Wis. 157.

Four years ago, Governor McGovern sought to oust Commissioner Ekern from office. The governor had suspended him and then sought forcing to eject him from the office. The firm of Aylward, Davies & O'Brien was retained by the commissioner and represented him in the hearing before the governor, in the circuit and supreme courts and won a signal victory. chairman of the democratic state convention.

He had twice been nominated at the primaries after a hard contest as the democratic candidate for governor.

A year ago he was a candidate of the progressive democrats for United States senator. Senator Hustling also was a candidate as a progressive democrat.

In order to insure the nomination of a progressive democrat, Mr. Aylward withdrew in favor of Senator Hustling, thus insuring the election of a progressive democratic senator.

Later, he vindicated Senator Hustling's election in the supreme court in a mandamus proceeding against the state board of canvassers. State ex rel Hustling, 169 Wis. 215.

Early Wilson Supporter.

Early in September, 1911, Mr. Aylward and Mr. Davies wrote Governor Wilson tendering him their support and asking only for an opportunity to be of service to him. At the request of Mr. McCoombs, Mr. Aylward acted as chairman of the Wilson forces in the primary campaign. Joseph E. Davies shared equally all of the campaign and responsibilities of that campaign. They succeeded in winning twenty-three out of the twenty-six delegates for the governor at the Baltimore convention. Mr. Aylward was also one of the delegates to the convention.

October 25, 1911, Woodrow Wilson, then governor of New Jersey, was a guest at his home. He then introduced him as the next president of his organization behind Wilson and was responsible possibly more than any other man for procuring Wilson's first election to the national convention. He did much to strengthen the wavering ones at Baltimore. He was appointed United States district attorney, which office he held until the time of his death. His last work was in preparation for the trial of Bob Shields for "White Slavery," which he was to have taken up on Tuesday next.

During the fall of 1915, Secretary McCoombs of the treasury department, visited in Madison, and was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Aylward.

Mr. Aylward, in addition to his other work, had been active in business matters sufficient to give him a practical insight into business methods.

He was secretary and a director of the Madison Plow company, a company engaged in the manufacture of agricultural implements.

He was a director and the general counsel of the Guardian Life Insurance company of Madison, Wisconsin.

He had always interested himself in public matters and was one of the curators of the State Historical Library.

Mr. Aylward was well known in Janesville, and had frequently made speeches in this city. His last appearance was at the October meeting of the Twilight club, when he upheld the Wilson side of the argument in a debate on "Wilson or Hughes." He was a convincing speaker, well informed and had a number of Janesville friends are planning to attend the funeral.

Albert Francisco.

Evansville, Nov. 12.—Albert Francisco dropped dead Saturday afternoon at the home of his employer, John Appel, of this city. Death resulted from heart failure. Mr. Francisco was born in the state of New York, and although seventy-two years of age proved to be hearty and hale. Less than a week ago he had assisted Mr. Appel to cut down a number of large trees on the local school grounds.

On Thursday night Mr. Francisco fell ill and called a physician, but on Friday seemed to have fully recovered. At about three o'clock in the afternoon he stepped from the house to an adjacent outbuilding. It was here that the body was found by members of the Appel family, when his absence was noticed about fifteen or twenty minutes later.

The deceased had lived practically all of his life in Rock county. He came to Wisconsin while yet a mere boy. He early served an apprenticeship in the blacksmith trade, after which he set up in business for himself. He served at his trade not only in Evansville, but also at Brooklyn, Belvidere and Rockford. As old age made him unfit for the smithy trade, he worked at odd jobs. At the time of his death he was employed as an assistant to Mr. Appel, janitor of the city schools. He was a member of the Odd Fellows' lodge.

Mr. Francisco is survived by three brothers and two sisters, all of whom live in the west. His wife, Mrs. Francisco, died two years ago last July. With the exception of Mrs. J. B. Runey, of this city, who is a cousin, the deceased has no immediate relatives in this vicinity. Local officials are endeavoring at present to locate some of his brothers, but no funeral arrangements can be made until word can be received from the west.

Dr. V. E. Winston.

Word was received here Saturday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. V. E. Winston, of their son, Dr. V. E. Winston, of Keystone, South Dakota. On Friday evening the bereaved parents received word that Dr. Winston was very ill and had been removed to a local hospital. In spite of this short knowledge of his illness, word of his death came as a severe shock to all members of the Winston family.

Dr. Winston was a young man in the prime of life and had built up a very successful medical practice. He was born in this city on Oct. 4, 1883; was educated in the local schools and later took his medical work at the Chicago Physicians' and Surgeons' school. Shortly after taking up the practice of medicine, he married and was later bereaved when his young wife died. Two years ago he again married, a Miss Matson of Keystone, South Dakota. Dr. Winston is a member of the Masonic lodge.

Dr. Winston is survived by his wife and one daughter, Thelma, age nine; by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Winston, of this city, and by a sister, Miss Ruth Winston, also of this city.

Just what funeral arrangements will be made is unknown. The body may be brought back to Wisconsin or may be buried at Keystone. Announcement of these arrangements will be made later.

Mrs. Gus Adece.

Death came at three o'clock Sunday morning to end life's cares and sorrows for Mrs. Gus Adece of Mill street. Mrs. Adece had been in poor health for some time and for the past week her condition had been regarded as very critical, with life's stream ebbling very low.

The deceased was well known by a large number of friends in this city, who in this hour of bereavement are extending their deepest sympathies and kindest ministrations to the sorrowful family.

Four motherless children surviving, death truly seems a cruel, heartless ogre. Besides the four children, Cecil, Ivan, Roy and Dorothy, Mrs. Adece is survived by her husband and three brothers, Charles Fryer of this city, Edward Fryer of Freeport and Arthur Fryer of Capron, Ill.; also by a sister, Mrs. Agnes Bidwell of Rockford.

Funeral services will be held on Tuesday afternoon at one-thirty o'clock from the Methodist church. Rev. Charles Becker will officiate. Interment will be made in Maple Hill cemetery.

The firemen's ball given Friday evening at Magee's hall proved to be one of the most successful dances on record. Over one hundred and forty paid admissions were sold. The support which the local citizens gave them, and as for the party itself all came away with a feeling of a good time, having fully enjoyed themselves.
